We open the number Estudo Prévio journal number THIRTEEN with a very special interview. For the first time, we have interviewed an international guest, the Slovenian architect Maruša Zorec, who has shared with us her experience as a student, professor and architect.

In this issue, we also publish the theoretical component of two master's dissertations defended in the Autónoma University Department of Architecture. Selected for their quality and originality, these contributions illustrate how research can inform and be an essential component for the design, for students who have finished their degrees in architecture. At last, we present a review on the Simon Sadler book, The situationist city, which has already become a classic work to understand the Situationist International movement.
